CIO, STEEL MEN CONFER AGAIN AT WASHINGTON

Captive Mine Contract Will Expire at Midnight, Crisis Expected Monday.

FDR WAITS RESULTS

Says Mills Must Get Fuel; Congress Ready For Strike Showdown.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON — Leaders of the United Mine Workers and the steel industry worked today toward a solution of their union shop dispute, while the hours rolled on toward a midnight expiration of the miners' contract in steel's captive coal mines.

The two groups conferred, as they had late yesterday, in the light of President Roosevelt's declaration that it was his "indisputable obligation" to see that the steel mills get the coal they need to fill defense orders.

The 200-member UMW committee recessed until late today without action.

John L. Lewis, president of the miners' union, said after the policy meeting that he had reported informally to the union delegates from all coal fields in the country on Mr. Roosevelt's request for an agreement which will keep production going.

But at mine workers headquarters frequent references were made to contract provisions that upon expiration of a working agreement miners have no right to go upon company property. A truce extending the contract for the captive mines will expire at midnight tonight unless an extension should be ordered by the policy committee.

Benjamin Fairless of the United States Steel corporation immediately upon convening of the new conference with union leaders came from the hotel room meeting place to say that no indication of the progress of negotiations would be given until a recess around noon.

Whether or not the negotiations prevent a threatened strike affecting 53,000 captive mine workers Monday, highly placed Democratic members of congress declared that a showdown was imminent on legislation to prevent stoppages on work essential to defense.

Those legislators said they would demand on Monday to know when corrective measures would be considered.

Today's captive mine conference had a last-minute aspect. John L. Lewis, UMW president, agreed to a truce ending at midnight tonight, when he called off a three-day strike in the captive pits last month to permit the defense mediation board to pass on the union's demand for a union shop. The board ruled against the union,

Turkey and Trimmings Cost More, Thanksgiving Dinner $1.40 Higher

Mansfielders will pay more for their Thanksgiving turkey this year than ever before and the rising price of some of the trimmings will send the cost of the traditional holiday feast to an estimated increase of $1.40 over last year.

Turkey prices range from 9 to 10 cents higher on the pound than they did in 1940. Tom turkeys are retailing at 40 cents a pound and hens at 42. Last year customers paid 30 to 35 cents a pound for the Thanksgiving bird.

Two other important items on the holiday menu, oysters and chestnuts for dressing, have also taken a sharp upturn in price. Oysters are selling at 70 cents a quart as against 50 to 55 cents last year and chestnuts have jumped from 15 and 20 cents to 39.

Most of the chestnuts, one dealer said, are imported from Portugal and the war situation makes them hard to obtain. Other nuts are priced at five cents more on the pound than last year with the exception of soft-shelled almonds that are now 65 cents a pound, 20 cents above that of last year.

McMillan, who escaped injury; Them, and six other persons in his car were called before Prosecutor Harold Lutz today in an investigation of the accident. McMillan was held in the county jail until called by the prosecutor to give his version of the mishap.

Gordon Howe, 21, Ashland, and Virgil Brubaker, 19, Lucas, escaped with minor injuries when their car collided almost head-on with a truck and semi-trailer at 4:30 a. m. today on U. S. Route 42 five miles south of Mansfield.

Germans Claim Sub Victory In Mediterranean

Say Berlin Craft Sank Ark Royal and Damaged 31,000 Ton Battleship; Admit Soviets Take Initiative From Leningrad to Donets.

BULLETIN

LONDON—(AP)—The admiralty announced tonight that there was only one casualty among the approximately 1,600 men aboard the British aircraft carrier Ark Royal, torpedoed and sunk in the Mediterranean.

(By United Press)

Germany claimed a submarine victory over the British fleet in the Mediterranean for the first time today, but on the eastern front the Red army again attacked Axis positions from Leningrad to Moscow and the Donets basin.

Berlin, Rome and radio Moscow all agreed that the Russians were taking the initiative except in hard fighting on unchanged fronts in the Crimea. In the north the Russians were using British tanks.

Extensive gains were not claimed by the Soviets and it was pointed out by radio Moscow that the Germans still were moving reserves up to the central front in an effort—so far vain—to get their offensive rolling against the capital.

But in the Kalinin sector the Russians were reported to have continued local advances, on the Nara river they captured several more villages and in the Donets basin they hurled back the Italians with 60 attacks in four days.

Weather conditions were getting steadily worse before Moscow, with many German troops suffering from frost bite, according to the Russian broadcasts.

Rome acknowledged that the Russians in the Donets sector were constantly attacking with tanks and airplanes supplemented by cavalry and on the Moscow front the Germans said that the enemy had launched "heavy" blows. The Axis dispatches said that these counter-attacks were being repulsed.

On the sea front, the Germans said that two of their submarines which reinforced Italian naval forces in the Mediterranean had attacked a British naval force with success. It was a German submarine, according to Berlin, that torpedoed and sank the battle-scarred British aircraft carrier Ark Royal, which went down east of Gibraltar with a reported loss of about 60 men.

In addition, the Germans said one of the submarines damaged the British 31,000-ton battleship Malaya, which was extensively repaired last summer in the United States. Other warships

Crews, Guns Ready In Atlantic Ports for Arming U. S. Ships

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON — Actual arming of American merchant ships is expected to get under way next week in busy shipping centers along the Atlantic coast.

Trained gun crews and scores of three, four and five-inch weapons as well as .50 caliber machine-guns have been collected at unidentified strategic centers by the navy, to be mounted on cargo vessels as rapidly as they come into port.

The work will start immediately after Mr. Roosevelt signs into law the neutrality act revision measure passed by the house Thursday to authorize American merchant ships to go anywhere in the world under protection of their own flags and guns. The bill probably will reach the president Monday or Tuesday.

The size of the vessels will determine the size of armament they receive. Some of the largest and most modern ships on the dangerous runs across the North Atlantic will be equipped with five-inch dual purpose

Reports City Has 7 Diphtheria and 8 Chicken Pox Cases

Wild also reported that a fifth case of undulant fever had been recorded. Four other cases had been reported since the beginning of the month.

In reporting the diptheria and undulant fever cases, the health commissioner called attention to the fact that both are milk-borne diseases. Although diptheria can be contracted through direct contact, it is transmitted through milk in several instances. He urged

GEN. JOHNSON:

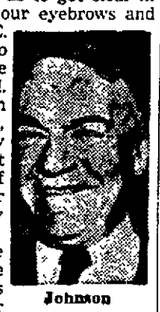
By GEN. HUGH S. JOHNSON

WASHINGTON—There are several reasons advanced by those who want us to get clear in this war up to our eyebrows and send a new A. E. F.—maybe to France, maybe to Burma road. They don't seem to care much, and it is worthy of some note that none or few of them would ever have to do any actual fighting.



Johnson

Among these reasons are "England is fighting our war," or, "Russia is now our battle line," and "we can't stand for Hitlerism in the world" even while we hold our nose at communism and swallow it.

It seems to me that there is a sufficient answer to all these, but there is no space for that here. Let's take another one which is a honey. It is "our people won't do their best in war production and sacrifice until we get some of our boys killed in battle. We should declare war tomorrow to speed up our effort."

How anybody has the face to say such a murderous thing is beyond me and I am—or was for more than forty years—a soldier.

The delays in our production can be traced back in nearly all cases to two causes—the woefully inept administration itself and the determination of some sections in organized labor to get all they can out of this crisis while the getting is good. This also is in part the fault of government. It has belabored industry and coddled labor for years—sowing the wind today—to meet the whirlwind.

There is only one hand that can help this situation and that is the hand at the helm—the president's. Perhaps no man could have completely prevented early industrial delays due to an unready organization, but a man with the president's prestige and popularity could have done much to avoid it by better organization and administration.

Perhaps no man could have averted some strikes, but a firm executive hand could have made many unnecessary.

Here is a little incident which, standing by itself, doesn't amount to much, but is very characteristic. When OPM was first installed, Big Bill Knudsen in charge of production asked: "Who is boss?" The president answered that he would be the boss. Recently Sidney Hillman, head of a labor union and deep in labor politics, said very positively that he alone is responsible for labor policies, and Leon Henderson confirmed that in some congressional testimony.

Look back over the record and consider the federal organizations set up to deal with labor. We start with Muddom Perkins and her conciliation service. That was such a flop that we set up two national labor relations boards—one after the other. The second was so full of favoritism and so grossly unfair that, until reorganization, it was a stench to the skies. Much of its work was by-passed to the new mediation board, of which William Davis is chairman.

He has a brilliant mind and an eloquence in ordinary conversation that could charm a bird out of a tree. But at least when I had him in NRA in charge of compliance, it took all the time in the calendar to get a decision out of him, and when it came it was usually some kind of compromise with expediency that made everybody mad.

When you boil all this down to the essence you get the same answer as in any administration problem. You've got to get men—competent and determined men. Without them the best plan and organization chart in the world won't work.

With them you don't need any organization chart. You just get them together in a room, tell them what's to be done and not to step on each others' toes, and give them enough authority and responsibility to do the job.

This administration has never done that.

It isn't killing a few thousand American boys that will speed this country up. It is competent management of the operation.

Reports Program to Double Arms Output

PREDICT U. S. CAN MEET NEED FOR ALUMINUM

Defense Officials Give Pot and Pan Drive Part Credit But Say 'Never Again.'

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON — With their fingers crossed, defense officials are predicting that the U. S. would catch up and keep abreast of aluminum demands within the next three or four months.

Although giving major credit to plant expansion and new facilities, which have been rushed since last spring, OPM officials declared that the government's "pots and pans" collection last summer was an important factor.

In the same breath, OPM made it plain that this campaign had been tucked away in the never-again file.

With more than 12,000,000 pounds of scrap contributed, officials have estimated that the drive will ultimately produce about 7,000,000 pounds of second-grade aluminum, suitable for some types of aircraft construction, battleship parts, shell fuse parts, tank parts, bomb fuses, and other military items.

But, OPM still is receiving complaints about delays in moving the piles of pots and pans and jibes that the campaign was a fake, and the pots and pans worthless in defense production.

On the first point, OPM official blame Fiorelle La Guardia, who directed the campaign as civilian defense coordinator, and who barred junk and waste dealers from participating; on the second, OPM can only shout "falsehood" and lineup any number of experts and any amount of facts and figures to prove its case.

The OPM's row with La Guardia has raged behind the scenes since before the aluminum drive began last July. Recently, William Knudsen, OPM director-general, brought it into the open with a terse comment that La Guardia made a "silly mistake" in believing the scrap collected by and for the government could then be turned over to junk dealers and sold for profit.

Ordinarily, junk and waste dealers would clean, sort and bale such scrap and ship it to smelters ready for immediate refining.

In the aluminum drive, however, the scrap was sent direct to smelters which had no facilities for such work. Some had to hire and train crews of sorters. Trainloads of pots and pans backed up in smelters' yards and the railroads finally refused to transport additional scrap until cars already tied up were unloded and returned.

Even today, many smelters have piles of the unsorted scrap on hand.

WHAT'S A JEEP?

It's 7 Things, Soldiers Hunt Substitute Word.

MEMPHIS, Tenn. —(INS)— The enlisted men at the second army headquarters today were busily thumbing through dictionaries for a word to supplant "jeep," the descriptive noun that was ruled from soldiers' vocabularies by Capt. E. B. Nichols.

The reason Cap. Nichols objected to the indiscriminative use of "jeep" was that it may indicate at least seven things. They are: trucks, command cars, bantam scout cars, armored scout cars, mechanical air raid sentries, mechanical anti-aircraft gun aimers, and small observation planes used by field artillery units.

"It seems to me that the boys could think of a name for these things without calling them all jeeps," said Capt. Nichols. "All of them just can't be jeeps."

PLANS DEMAND FOR SESSION

Bittinger Has Support of Mayors For New Request To Allocate Surplus.

(By United Press)

COLUMBUS — Supported by mayors of two large Ohio cities, State Democratic Chairman J. Freer Bittinger today planned to renew demands for a special legislative session to reallocate surplus state funds to local governments.

Bittinger said he had the support of Frank J. Lausche of Cleveland and George J. Harter of Akron, newly-elected Democratic mayors.

"With Mayor Lausche and Mayor-elect Harter working for the same purpose, we stand an excellent opportunity to gain our objective," Bittinger said in a statement. "Thus far the governor has refused to act in spite of the harm he must know he is doing but he can't always ignore public demands.

"I am anticipating a call from the governor to the legislature early in the new year. He will issue a statement he is going to reduce taxes and the attempt will be made for political purposes to make it appear the governor is doing something remarkable.

"When the special session is held the governor will not and cannot expect to receive credit. The dream he had of parading himself as being a champion of the people has been thoroughly exploded."

MAN ACCUSED OF KILLING WIFE FACES STEPSON IN COURT TODAY

(By International News Service)

MONTERREY, Mexico — Dr. Arthur Frederick Torrance, British-born explorer and physician, accused of murdering his 70-year-old bride of three weeks, will face his accuser in court today.

The handsome, 55-year-old doctor, whose jungle exploits won him fame, is accused of slaying his wife, the former Ada Cook Loveland of Kalamazoo, Mich.

The accuser, Richard Loveland, son of the dead woman by a previous marriage, will charge the physician killed Mrs. Torrance by a blow on the forehead with a blunt instrument. Torrance will give his version—that his wife struck her head on the rear-view mirror of her car when she swerved suddenly to avoid an accident.

Yesterday Dr. Torrance returned to the scene of the alleged accident in which his wife met her death last Saturday. Public Prosecutor Juan Jose Vallejo, ordered him to recount exactly what had occurred.

Meanwhile, Mrs. Torrance's body was exhumed and an autopsy performed. No autopsy was performed before interment. Loveland was reported to have requested that the medical examiner search for traces of poison.

Torrance told police that his wife was driving when the "accident" occurred after she swerved to avoid a cow. He declared the car turned over and that he was thrown out and knocked unconscious. When he recovered, he said, he found his wife lying in the road badly hurt.

Police had Torrance act out the whole version, sitting in the car, showing exactly where the cow stood and then lying in the road.

It was reported that Torrance had been about to leave Monterrey when Loveland arrived to insist that the case, originally dismissed as a routine accident, be reopened. According to police, Torrance had obtained power of attorney from his wife.

Being fussy about giving your address to every stranger may be wise in most instances but one Mansfield resident wishes today that he hadn't been so secretive. Delbert Stevens, taxicab driver, told police last night that a passenger had hired him to take him to his home in Lincoln Heights. Arriving there, the passenger refused to tell Stevens his address or to pay the $1.50 fare owed the driver. Stevens returned his passenger to Mansfield police headquarters and there he was booked on an intoxication charge.

There was a mad scramble for pennies, nickels, dimes and quarters in the vicinity of the Mansfield Telephone company yesterday afternoon when Mrs. Claude Wert of Shaull, Mayberry and Balliett, realtors, dropped her purse containing about $10 in change accumulated after paying a number of telephone bills for her respective employers. Passers-by came to the rescue and before long about 20 people were engaged in the business of retrieving the rolling coins. And not one cent was lost in the process, Mrs. Wert reported.

OHIO COMPANY SAYS PLAN TO HIT EVERYONE

Will Entail Stringent Cut In Production Of Civilian Goods.

(By United Press)

CLEVELAND — The Cleveland Trust company said today that a program is developing in Washington for virtual doubling production of munitions which will involve "almost universal sacrifice in a great common national effort.

It said, however, that in many lines of manufacturing it will be impossible to double the rate or output of war goods within the next two years.

"It appears to be true that such greatly increased programs are actually being adopted," the company's business bulletin said, "and if so, the result will be that they will entail much more stringent curtailment in the production of ordinary civilian goods than has previously been contemplated.

"This means more than a mere end to business as usual. It involves almost universal sacrifice in a great common national effort."

The bulletin pointed out, however, that especially in shipbuilding the program will fall short of its goal since "it is not possible for our economy to double within the next two years the rates of output of war goods that had been planned for in the earlier programs."

Nevertheless, the report said, "we shall make as many planes, ships and munitions as we can, and the outputs will be huge."

The Trust company analysis said that while the bank's index of the volume of industrial production at 18 per cent above the computed normal level in June was the highest figure attained in the current recovery figure, subsequent months have been only slightly lower.

The figure for October is still subject to revision, the bulletin said, but estimated production at 16 per cent above normal.

A significant by-product of the defense program, was bulletin added, is the sharp reversal of trade between the United States and South America.

"During the past year imports jumped sharply from a level of about 30 million dollars a month to well over 50 milion," it said, "while exports starting from about the same level increased only one third as much."

Railroad freight traffic passed its peak in October, the traditional peak month of traffic, the report stated, without the country experiencing the car shortage that was predicted by some authorities earlier in the year.

Harriman Flies To Britain to Study Conditions

NEW YORK —(INS)— W. Averell Harriman, lease-lend co-ordinator at London, departed today for Lisbon aboard the Atlantic clipper along with five congressmen who are en route to England to study war conditions and needs.

The congressmen making the trip were Joseph C. Baldwin and W. Sterling Cole of New York, William S. Hill of Colorado, Melvin J. Maas and Richard P. Gale of Minnesota.

"We want to see for ourselves how lend-lease is working, what the civil defense of England and the war effort in general are like," Baldwin asserted.

"Representative Hill and myself, as members of the labor committee, are particularly interested in how the government is handling the labor situation in England and how strikes are prevented or handled.

"We plan to have several talks with the British labor ministry."

TIED FOR FIRST

BROADWAY

—By Dorothy Kilgallen

You Can't Print That!

(A compendium of talks that can't be told with names, because they're too true to print. If you find in them any resemblance to actual persons, living or dead—you've probably guesed right!)

JERRY is a bookmaker and Ronald is an actor, and they are—or rather were—two of the closest pals on all Broadway. They trusted each other in everything, with money and even with each other's girls, which, of course, is trusting too much.

Kilgallen

Ronald, the actor, has always been known as one of the town's fastest fellows with a bottle, and for years his friends—particularly Jerry—lectured him on the evils of drink. "You'll never amount to anything," Jerry would warn him. "A drunk is worse than a murderer."

Jerry, it is time to report, had a girl he thought more of than any one in the world. Each night he'd meet her in some quiet place where the Broadway mob would see them and they'd talk over their plans for getting married this Winter.

But one night a few weeks ago the bookie got stuck late at his office. He'd made the usual date with his sweetheart, and, being a considerate fellow, he didn't like to have her sitting alone. So he called Ronald and asked him if he'd mind keeping the kid company for a couple of hours. And Ronald said sure, anything for a pal.

Well, Ronald and the girl clicked immediately. She's Ronald's girl now. And they almost never see Jerry.

The payoff is the strangest part of the story. For the girl has made Ronald give up drinking, and he doesn't touch the stuff now. But Jerry, the teetotaler, has been drunk ever since!

But you can't print that. Nobody can feel very sory for Jerry. He flaunted the old Broadway axiom: Never trust a ham with your cookie.

Back in the old prohibition days, which are now known fondly as the good old days around Broadway, two of the best known members of the night life cast were Joe and Bert. They were much the same type, outwardly at least—both handsome, big, well-dressed guys who knew their way around.

But underneath they were as different as good and bad. Which is just what they were—Joe being a vicious killer for one of the big mobs. Bert being a tough but square cop on the Broadway Squad.

One night, as might be expected, Joe was rubbed out by his own boss, who did the job with a knife in a little all-night joint in Harlem. But those little details were not immediately known, so Bert was assigned to solve the crime.

Clues were scarce, so Bert concentrated his detecting in the direction of Joe's widow, a striking show girl.

By the time Bert had unraveled all the leads and learned the killer's identity, Joe's underworld pals had avenged the killing. But also by that time Bert had fallen madly in love with the widow. And the romance has stuck like the old-time romance of your grandfather and grandmother, believe it or not.

In fact, now that Bert is leaving the department with a nice pension, he and Joe's widow are going to be married!

But you can't print that. Let them live happily ever after. Fate is funny, you know. They probably will.

REDS ATTACK ALONG WHOLE GERMAN FRONT

Nazis Claim Sinking of Ark Royal and Battleship By Hitler U-Boats.

not named were also damaged, the Germans claimed.

The German naval reinforcements in the Mediterranean apparently were intended to bolster the Italian fleet in view of almost constant aerial and naval attacks by the British on Axis supply lines from Italy to the North African desert.

On the far northern front, according to Stockholm, the Russians are using British-built tanks for the first time in defense of Murmansk and the railroad line running southward along the White sea. The Russians also were said to be holding out strongly at their base of Hango, in southwestern Finland, which has been under partial blockade since the war started.

On the Crimean front, the Germans again reported they were making progress toward Kerch and Sevastopol, but acknowledged that they were encountering strong resistance in their efforts to break across the Kerenski straits to the mainland route toward the Caucasus oil fields.

Russian defenses of Rostov continued to hold.

In the Far East, the Japanese diet met for organizational purposes preparatory to issuance of a rescript by Emperor Hirohito on Sunday and speeches on Monday by Premier Gen. Hideki Tojo and Foreign Minister Shigenori Togo, both of whom are expected to declare Japan's intention of carrying on her plans for a new order in east Asia.

Japanese spokesmen said that the United States apparently was preparing for "the worst" in the Far East by withdrawing United States marines from China stations.

CIO, STEEL MEN RESUME PARLEY

Deadline For Captive Mine Contract Tonight, Crisis Expected Monday.

9 to 2, and CIO members resigned from the board in protest.

There was no word from Lewis as to whether the midnight deadline stood. The miners however, do not work Sundays, so the real crisis appeared due Monday morning.

Mr. Roosevelt called the disputants to a White House conference yesterday. Releasing a transcript of part of his remarks to the steel men and UMW representatives, the president disclosed he had told them flatly that to cease producing coal for the steel mills would "create a further danger to American defense" and that if legislation were required to keep production going, congress would be asked for it.

Further, he said, the government "will not order, nor will congress pass legislation ordering a so-called closed shop."

The miners have demanded a union shop under which every employe would have to become a member of the union after a specified period of employment.

The president urged the conferees to continue their negotiations and try to produce an agreement, or at least a progress report, by Monday. They went into another session later, but reached no conclusions.

Meanwhile, threats of truck transportation stoppage in 11 midwest states were stilled by announcements of union and company officials that an agreement had been reached in a wage dispute. It will be referred to the mediation board and both sides, said the OPM, will abide by the decision in the interest of national defense.

The threat of a general railroad strike over wage rates appeared not to subside. Representatives of the five operating brotherhoods outlined instructions for a walkout to begin at 6 a. m. Dec. 7. The men operating the trains were told to quit at that hour unless they have begun a run, in which case they are to complete it. Acts of violence were forbidden in messages sent by headquarters to 500 general chairmen and 10,000 local chairmen.

The tract, known as the "Willard marsh," will be opened to public hunting as soon as possible, Waters said.

TURNS TABLES AT FDR DINNER

Press Club Will Rib Itself Instead Of President Tonight.

WASHINGTON—(U.P.)—The National Press club reverses customary procedure tonight at its annual dinner for President Roosevelt.

Entertainment features of such dinners usually are skits "ribbing" the chief executive and his aides.

The 1941 entertainment, however, will give Mr. Roosevlt a glance at the more intimate phases of the club's daily—and nightly—activities, including those around the club bar.

JAP ENVOY DUE IN WASHINGTON

Brings Reported Plan For Settlement of Pacific Area Controversies.

marines from China, Britain's pledge to declare war on Japan "within the hour," if she becomes involved in war with the United States, the speeches of Navy Frank Knox, have demonstrated Anglo-American readiness for anything the future may bring in the Pacific. The truculent tone of the Japanese press and reports of ominous Japanese troops movements have seemed to indicate that Japan is preparing for drastic action.

Kurusu, who flew from Tokyo in little more than a week, arrives at Washington airport at 1:04 p. m., from San Francisco.

It was learned from reliable sources that Kurusu is bringing a new approach to U. S.-Japanese difficulties which have been discussed for months in "exploratory" conversations between Hull and Nomura.

MANSFIELD MAN DIES IN MISHAP

Herbert Page, Truck Driver, Killed When Struck by Car on U. S. Route 42.

They were treated at General hospital for lacerations and bruises and released this morning.

Dale Yaw, 21, Detroit, Mich., driver of the truck, was cited for unsafe driving by state highway patrolmen and fined $20 and costs today in Mansfield municipal court. Patrolmen said he apparently went to sleep, his truck swerving across the highway into the path of the car driven by Howe. Yaw was driving south and Howe was headed north. The car was demolished.

Injured in the third accident was Richard C. Wehinger, 20, Mansfield R. D. 2, whose car ran off State Route 545 into a ditch about five miles north of Mansfield early today. He was treated at General hospital for facial lacerations.

Them, whose car struck Page in the accident northeast of the city, told Deputy Gongwer that he saw McMillan, Page's companion, in time to avoid hitting him, but he was blinded by the lights of an on-coming car and failed to see Page until he was directly in the path of his car.

Gongwer said Them apparently swerved his car to the left, for both right fenders were dented, two windows in the right side of the car were broken, and there was a dent in the top. Page's body was thrown against a fence at the side of the highway. Coroner L. B. McCullough said death was almost instantaneous from a crushed chest and internal injuries.

Them told authorities he was driving northeast toward Ashland and Page and McMillan were walking on the left side of the highway facing the car. Riding with Them were his wife, Mrs. Alice Them; Mr. and Mrs. Chester Sisson, 92 East Fourth street; Leroy McMillan, 352 South Diamond street; John Coulter, 207½ West Fourth street, and Ora Rusk, Mansfield R. D. 3. All of them were called before the prosecutor today for questioning.

Page was born April 20, 1894, in Mansfield and lived here all his life. He had been employed by Rusk brothers for about 20 years.

Funeral services will be held at 3:30 p. m. Monday at the Wappner funeral home where the body was taken after the accident. Rev. Grover E. Swoyer, pastor of the First Lutheran church, will officiate. Burial will be in the Mansfield cemetery.

Surviving are his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Page, Oak street road; two brothers, Harry of Mansfield and Raymond of Mifflin township; and four sisters, Mrs. George Guiher, Mrs. Leonard Mawhorr, and Miss Dorothy Page, all of Mansfield, and Mrs. Clyde Thomas, Philadelphia, Pa.

As the result of the two accidents west of the city last night, Howard Helfrich, Galion, was held today in the Mansfield city jail on a charge of operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of alcohol. His hearing was set for Monday.

Helfrich was taken into custody by police after his car allegedly collided with one driven by J. D. Haley, Craig Beach, O., on Park avenue west near Trimble road and crowded another car driven by Archie Johnson, Mansfield R. D. 3, off the highway west of the city.

Haley told police he caught up with Helfrich and forced him to stop after their cars collided. Later, Johnson reported that Helfrich's car was the one that forced him off the highway and failed to stop.

The U. S. army has approximately 90,000 commissioned officers.

Reports City Has 7 Diphtheria and 8 Chicken Pox Cases

all residents to purchase milk only from registered dairies and inspected farms.

The chicken pox cases were reported from the west central section of the city. Although contagious, it is not considered a dangerous disease.

Of the eight cases reported in the county last year, seven were from the northern part of the county and only one from the southern portion. School authorities closed the Cass township school after a case was discovered there. A preschool girl was treated in vain and died.

Wild revealed that "examination of persons exposed to the seven definite cases of diptheria have revealed the presence of several 'carriers.'" He explained that carriers are persons who carry the disease germs without having the disease but still transmit it to others.

"The most successful way to control this problem," said Wild, "is to immunize our children when they are six months old and again just before they enter school. We urge all parents in Mansfield and Richland county to have their children examined carefully by their physicians and to take them back again at the first sign of trouble."

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

MANSFIELD, OHIO, SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 15 1941

Drive carefully tomorrow—and look out for drunken drivers after midnight.

"The more you sweat now, the less you will bleed later," a captain tells his training troops. Civilians, too, ought to learn something like that.

Now that Harold Ickes has been made coal co-ordinator for defense, a little more help from John L. Lewis will give him a real shortage to warn against.

President's 'Closed Shop' Statement

THE POSITION of the United States government in the controversy now raging between owners and employes of "captive" coal mines was clearly defined yesterday by President Roosevelt in a statement issued at a White House conference attended by representatives of the disputing factions.

One statement, in particular, serves to clarify the president's views on a highly controversial matter, and one on which the entire "captive" mine strike threat seems to hinge.

After stressing the necessity of continuous production of coal, for use in steel plants engaged in defense work, and urging further negotiations in an effort to reach agreement, the president said:

"I tell you frankly that the government of the United States will not order, nor will congress pass legislation ordering a so-called 'closed shop'. . . . It is true that 95 per cent, or more, of the employes of these particular mines belong to the United Mine Workers union. The government will never compel this 5 per cent to join the union by a government decree. That would be too much like the Hitler method toward labor."

This statement of the government's position follows so closely a similar attitude taken by the national defense mediation board, with CIO members as the only objectors in the 9 to 2 decision, that there can be no doubt of the determination of this administration to safeguard all citizens in the right to work, without requirement for union membership.

On this point the president said: "It is true that, by agreement between employers and employes in many plants of various industries, the closed shop is now in operation. This is the result of legal collective bargaining, and not of government compulsion on employers or employes."

It will be recalled that, following announcement of the mediation board's decision against closed shop compulsion in the operation of captive mines, Philip Murray and Thomas Kennedy, CIO representatives on the board, resigned therefrom because of the majority decision against a closed shop, and fear was expressed that this would result in a breakdown of all mediation processes.

Now, however, President Roosevelt, recognized as one of the best friends of organized labor who has ever occupied that high position, has stated what a majority of Americans have heretofore regarded as a basic American principle—the right of individual decision and protection of minority rights under majority rule.

As trade unionism in the United States gains in experience, and in the quality and intelligence of its leadership, it will regain and merit the confidence and encouragement which its legitimate purposes justify—but which have been lessened by actions against public policy and in defiance of governmental appeals for co-operation in the national defense program.

Coal must be mined, railway and other forms of transportation must be uninterrupted, production of defense and war materials must go forward at increased speed.

Not as a threat, but as a plain statement of fact, President Roosevelt said: "If legislation becomes necessary toward this end, the congress of the United States will without any question pass such legislation. And, as some of you know; the pressure on me to ask for legislation . . . has been not only constant, but it has been very heavy."

Exhibit By Mansfield Artists

MANSFIELD'S infinite variety of talent now extends creditably into the fields of painting and sculpture, which makes possible local participation in observance of National Art week, starting tomorrow and continuing through next week.

The work of a considerable number of Mansfield artists has been carried along so quietly that many residents of this city and vicinity have failed to realize the extent to which this talent has developed here.

Organization of a local Art Council makes possible the group activities which have heretofore been lacking and provides leadership for the first public exhibition of the work of artists in the Mansfield area.

The public library is to serve one of its diversified purposes in providing space for this art exhibit, which is to be open tomorrow afternoon from 3 to 5, and thereafter during library hours through the week.

This will mark the start of what it is hoped will become an annual art exhibit and increasing recognition of the fine work being done by local artists.

Direct and Indirect Fire Losses

FIRE destroys about $300,000,000 worth of property each year, on the average. That destruction represents complete, unqualified waste. The loss to the nation can be illustrated by a few examples.

That $300,000,000 would buy 6,000 fighting planes costing $50,000 each!

It would buy 600 big bombers costing $500,000 each!

It would buy enough rifles costing $50 each for an army of 6,000,000 men!

It would buy 150,000 aerial bombs of great size costing $2,000 each!

It would buy two battleships costing $150,000,000 each!

It would buy more than 70 destroyers costing $4,000,000 each!

It would pay the wages of almost 15,000,000 private soldiers for one month, at the current rate of $21 each!

That gives an idea of what fire destroys each year in this country. And the $300,000,000 figure covers only the direct, measurable waste. According to authorities, the indirect waste caused by fire is several times as great. Loss of time, loss of taxes, loss of employment, loss of business—these are indirect tolls taken by fire, whose cost reaches a terrific figure.

Man About Manhattan

—By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK—Let me hear you say "Francescatti" right fast. Francescatti? That's fine. Here's why I said that:

After his appearances with the Pittsburgh Symphony under Fritz Reiner earlier this month, Zino Francescatti was guest of honor at a party where he was introduced to a lady who at once cried, "Have you the original manuscript of The Star Spangled Banner?"

"I beg your pardon," ejaculated the startled French violinist.

"But aren't you a descendant of Francis Scott Key?"

"No, no, I am Mr. Francescatti," he assured her, and yet, in repeating his own name, Francescatti, he became aware that it all sounded alike . . . francescatti . . . franciscottkey. . . .

With this revelation he was delighted. "It makes me feel so American," he cried.

THIS is an item with an American touch too. Raymond Paige, who once conducted the Ninety-nine-men-and-a-girl program, which was broadcast out of New York, is now the conductor of the 45-boys organization known as the Young Americans' Orchestra, . . . None of the musicians is under 16, none over 25. . . . All were born in the United States. . . . They represent 21 states, yet among them are 18 different nationalities. . . . They play only American music. . . . Soon this organization, with Paige conducting, leaves on a tour. . . . Its initial chore was appearing with the Name-band jubilee, for the benefit of the British-American Ambulance corps. Next it recorded an album of old American favorite songs, to be known as "From Golden Paiges of Melody." . . . At the moment it is getting ready for its tour. . . .

A PECULIARLY New Yorkian product about town are the U-Wear It shops, which rent "Tuxedos, Cutaways, Evening Clothes" to people who have no dress clothes of their own but who must get all dolled out for some special occasion. They are operated on the basis of the old U-drive it idea of renting an automobile for a day or a week—at so much per night.

What stands out about these places, especially along 6th Avenue and through the 40's are their billboards. They are as noticeable and conspicuous as the cigar store Indian, of hallowed memory. These displays show life size drawings of men in evening clothes, but the cut and style is that of the gay nineties. The britches are skin tight. The sleeves were the gaudily-cuffed variety so fashionable a quarter of a century ago. The men invariably sport handle-bar mustachios.

Do these shops do a business? Yes. They rent hundreds of formal wear units a week . . . "Fittings guaranteed." . . . It's a full time industry.

TRADEMARKS: If he draws a caricature of you within five minutes, it's Xavier Cugat. . . . If he talks faster than the late Floyd Gibbons, it's Elmer Leterman. . . . If she twists your hair into a spit-curl, it's Gracie Hartman. . . . If he's wearing a green hat with a blue hat-band, it's Blue Barron.

THE HAND THAT FED HIM

Predict Nazi Invasion of Sweden

—By CARTER FIELD

WASHINGTON—Prediction that Germany will invade Sweden within six months was made here by a man just returned from that country. It is amazing to most observers that this step was not taken by the Nazis long ago. The Swedes have a "good little army," and something like 800 airplanes, but most of the planes are obsolete.

If Sweden and Norway were a unit, or acting as a unit, and together resisted a fresh German invasion, they could give the Nazis plenty of trouble, it is pointed out. But Sweden alone could make only ineffective resistance now that Germany is occupying Norway—and practically Finland—and is able to pour any number of troops across the long frontier.

The invasion is expected because Berlin is far from satisfied with Swedish "cooperation." The Swedes have a good deal more food than people anywhere else in Europe, and, while they are about to start rationing, this is believed by the Nazis to be more of an excuse to avoid further exports of food to Germany than the result of real shortages.

ANOTHER thing that annoys the Germans is the Norwegian shipping tied up in Swedish harbors. The Germans want at least 500,000 tons of this. In fact they want it all, but they have asked for 500,000 tons.

So far the Swedes have been firm against this. Not only that but, very recently, four Norwegian ships loaded with machine tools and other essential war materials, slipped out of port and made their way successfully to Britain.

The funny part of this story is that the Germans knew it was planned in advance. They protested to Swedish officials, who said they had no authority to stop it, as the British had paid for the cargoes and the Norwegians owned the ships. It was up to the Germans, the Swedish officials said, to stop the ships AFTER they had sailed.

Surmise is that the Nazis were not as rough with the Swedes as they might have been because of their confidence they would be able to stop the ships, perhaps capture without sinking them, and thus acquire four valuable cargoes, not to mention the ships, which they want badly, without paying anything for them. But it so happened that all four got through safely.

One theory about this, however, is that it was not an accident. There are those who think the Nazis purposely allowed this thing to happen, so as to make a good case for taking Sweden over when the time comes. Objection to the theory seems to be that in that case allowing one ship to slip through would have been enough, even assuming that any excuse is deemed necessary by the Nazis when they decide to move.

What has delayed occupation of Sweden so far, some think, is that the Germans until very recently, if even yet, had not given up hope that the Swedes would join them in the war against Russia, Sweden's traditional enemy. All reports are that the Germans are simply amazed that the Swedes have failed to take advantage of this marvelous opportunity to do what the Finns have done in paying off old scores.

Maybe one of the reasons is that the Swedes believe, according to the man who recently arrived from Sweden, that the Finns want to get out of the war, now that they have recovered all the land taken from them by the Soviet, but that the Nazis will not let them stop. The same sort of thing, they may reason, might happen to Sweden.

Popularity Recipe

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

SO YOU want to be popular? And maybe I can tell you how.

I'm not sure that I can. I've never been the World's Favorite Female myself. But I do know that longing. And after many misspent years, I've stumbled on to a few helpful hints. The first of which is this:

If you want to be liked,
If you want to be welcome in any company,
If you want to inspire affection and attract confidence:

Confess with a grin that you're a fool! Don't be snoopy about it, nor snivelly. Stop inisisting on being right; just come down off your throne and admit you're one of the regular crowd. Realize you don't know everything. Stop expecting the other fellow to believe you're right. Admit you've made some of humanity's prize blunders—then watch 'em flock around!

How do I know this will work? Because I've seen it work on Exhibit A. . . . Me. Myself. There were doubtless multitudinous reasons why I wasn't popular in those sad old days. But, of them all, I'm sure that my desire to be the World's Wonder Girl came first.

I WANTED TO BE RIGHT. ALWAYS RIGHT.

Not only did I want to be right, but I also expected the Other Fellow to admit and admire my rightness. Nor did I even stop there. I wasn't stingy with my rightness. I was quite willing to share it with my more stupid and erring brothers and sisters. In fact, I practically insisted that they should let me put them right too . . . a service which they resented with extreme annoyance.

But why should they resent it? I wasn't mean about it. I didn't rub it in. I didn't remind them of how much my previous time they wasted by being in the wrong and needing correction. To the contrary, I was very decent about it . . . even forgiving. I used the light touch . . . you know, Firm but Friendly. And I congratulated myself that we always parted Better Friends.

Candor compels me to admit that they rarely shared my opinion. Indeed, they did not show the slightest inclination to be any kind of a friend to me anywhere, anyhow, anytime. That's gratitude for you!

And then one day, I—the omnipotent, omniscient I—made a glaring mistake myself. One of those mistakes you can't possibly excuse, explain or kiss away. So I did the only thing possible for me to do under the circumstances—I ADMITTED IT! It was, I confess, a bitter dose to take. But, to my amazement, the admission was greeted with warmth. Almost with cheers!

Were my eyes tricking me? Had I really stumbled on a source of popularity? Embolded by my discovery, I went even further. I admitted I had been wrong a few other times and stressed the fact of their superior wit and wisdom. (I didn't really believe it of course, but the experiment was worth following up.) And this time there could be no mistake. My audience actually beamed! At last I was popular! They liked me!

They'd been far wiser than I, all along. They'd known they were dumb clucks, and made no bones about it. Moreover, they had known that I was a bigger and better dumb cluck. So every time I put on my Superwoman Demonstration, I didn't fool them a snitch. I simply pestered and bored them to tears. But now that I'd taken down my hair and confessed our common humanity, everything was jake. We could all take it easy.

WANT TO BE POPULAR? THEN ADMIT YOU'RE A SAP. THEY KNOW IT ANYWAY.

Educational Challenge.

National education week grew out of the first World War and is now meeting its greatest challenge in the second World War. After the guns had ceased barking in 1918, it was realized that 25 per cent of the men who had been examined in the draft were illiterates, 29 per cent physically unfit, and so forth. The American Legion, the National Education Association and the United States office of education set out to correct conditions.

One device was National Education week, first observed in 1921, with the purpose of bringing closer relationships between the schools and the entire community.

A lot of good has been done by the 20 education weeks that have been celebrated in the past, and a lot more good must be done this year and in the future. The very state of the world today is demonstration enough that education has not yet found the answer to human behavior problems.—Springfield News.

Summary of Week's Happenings

Open Seas to American Shipping, Prepare to Avert Strike Menace

—By ASSOCIATED PRESS

HERALDED as "the most significant development in the war's course since the invasion of Russia," congress took final action this week to throw neutrality overboard in an effort to safeguard shipment of war supplies to Great Britain and Russia.

By a vote of 212 to 194, the house of representatives, late Friday afternoon, sanctioned a senate amendment to permit American merchant ships to enter ports of "our friends" who are engaged in war.

Heavy administration pressure marked the final hours of debate on the bill, highlighted by a letter from President Roosevelt urging passage of the measure, defeat of which, he said, "would cause rejoicing in the Axis nations."

More Labor Strife.

When John L. Lewis ordered his 50,000 CIO United Mine Workers back to work in the "captive" coal pits, he gave the Defense Mediation Board until this weekend to reach a decision on the union shop issue, which had caused a three-day strike.

Monday the board recommended against the union shop. Next day CIO representatives quit the board wholesale. Philip Murray, CIO president, charged that AFL board members had committed "arch treason" to labor—that they had argued in favor of the union shop but voted against it.

Lewis himself didn't comment immediately on the decision. Apparently he preferred to let Friday's action of the union's policy committee speak for him.

Congress was losing patience. Senator Bridges (R-N.H.) drafted a bill which would forbid unions to strike in defense industries without a secret ballot conducted by NLRB. A White House secretary said it was safe to assume FDR would see that the government's position was maintained.

Wednesday night, with some congressmen hinting they wouldn't support the bill to allow U. S. ships to sail into war zones unless the government cracked down on labor, FDR called Lewis, Murray, Secretary Thomas Kennedy of the UMW and three steel company representatives to meet with him. (The steel companies own the "captives.")

Almost at the same instant, more trouble arrived. The heads of five "operating" railroad brotherhoods ordered their 350,000 members to begin striking Dec. 7 for a 30% wage increase, and the Independent Federation of Long Lines Telephone Workers announced that conferences with federal conciliators had failed to settle the Federation's demand for a 4% increase.

A west coast shipyard strike of independent welders was halted when the men, seeking union recognition, agreed to put their case before NDMB. Another western strike—called by AFL building trades unions in a wage dispute—tied up $25,000,000 in Navy and Marine Corps construction around San Diego, Calif., for several days.

At Home

Pressure for Tax Bill.

There is disagreement in Washington as to what should be done to check the threat of inflation. A price control bill is now before congress, and the administration wants to increase taxes by $4,850,000,000. The treasury has proposed bigger social security deductions and "withholding" taxes, running up to 15%, on pay checks.

During the week President Roosevelt himself wrote Chairman Doughton of the house ways and means committee, asking the tax program be put ahead of everything else.

"Unless we start within two or three months," he said, "to withdraw through taxes a larger part of the national income, an even greater part may evaporate through inflation."

'Nice, Comfortable War.'

As SPAB took preliminary steps toward rationing of all "critical" industrial materials, its executive director, Donald Nelson, was telling the Associated Grocery Manufacturers he believed food prices had gone about as high as they should.

"So far," he said, "a number of people have found it a nice, comfortable war—a time of expanding business. . . . But it isn't going to last much longer."

$1-a-Year Men Eyed.

Washington swarms with business men who have left their jobs temporarily to work with various defense agencies for $1 a year.

During the week Chairman Truman (D-Mo.) of the special senate defense investigating committee announced the committee was checking up on dollar-a-year men and their business friends.

"Nobody can live here on $1 a year," he commented.

No Moaning, Please.

Margery Wilson, head of Massachusetts extension courses in charm and etiquette, offers this advice to the girls left behind:

"Letters to boys in camp should be joyous and cheerful — and chatty, too." Definitely out, says Miss Wilson, is stuff like: "I miss you so, dear—Last night the moon was so beautiful."

More Milk, Please.

The Agriculture Department is calling on American cows to give more milk for defense. The increase in the number of cows isn't enough to supply the extra milk needed for dairy products to be shipped to England, so the department is promoting a milk-producing diet program. It hopes to increase the milk supply 4% next year—from 117,000,000,000 pounds to 125,000,000,000 pounds. A greater amount is to be put into milk derivatives than this year.

Abroad

Japan's Flying Envoy.

Saburo Kurusu, Japan's special envoy, flew eastward across the Pacific with Tokyo's formula for ending U. S.-Japanese friction.

Although Kurusu was reliably reported to have told friends there was "not much hope" he would succeed, commentator DeWitt Mackenzie wrote that Japan probably really wants to avoid trouble — "She doesn't need to send a special envoy just to tell Uncle Sam to go to the devil." And the Foreign Policy Association declared "The balance of power in southeast Asia has shifted against Japan."

Winter In Russia.

By midweek Nazis in Russia were reporting that bitter weather had practically stalled the fighting. The Russians, however—estimating the Moscow campaign had cost the Nazis more than 70,000 dead and wounded—said Berlin was using the weather and reports of sensational gains in the Crimea "to cover up the situation" on the central front—"The weather helps, but the basic factor is the army."

Adding to the German army's difficulties, Berlin said, were underground "tank garages," from which tanks could "appear suddenly, fire a few shots and then disappear." Berlin also said that Russians had made the approaches to Moscow into "a single mine field."

Fools and Revolt.

Roy Porter, AP correspondent returning from Vichy, reported the reaction of the average Frenchman to the killing of German officials was that the slayers were fools—"not because they kill the Germans, but because their acts bring trouble to so many other people."

He said there was no evidence of organized revolt and that there seemed to be more of a defeatist attitude in France than there was even when France fell. He predicted the coming winter will be the hardest Frenchmen have known in years.

Latin American Department.

Pedro Aguirre Cerda was elected president of Chile in 1938 by a "popular front" of Radicals, Socialists, Radical-Socialists, Democrats, Communists and the Confederation of Labor. Stoutly he weathered an army revolt and two plots, promised to complete his six-year term.

But during the week 62-year-old "Don Pedro" gave in to illness and resigned his post in favor of Dr. Jeronimo Mendez, leader of the middle-class Radical party, most powerful in Chile.

All In White.

In 1938 Blanche Thebon was working in Canton, O., but all the time she and her parents were dreaming of the day when she would sing at a big concert "dressed all in white."

That year she went with her parents on a trip to their birthplace in Sweden. On board the ship was Kosti Vehanen, accompanist to Marian Anderson, the great negro soprano. Vehanen heard Blanche sing on an informal program. He arranged for her to meet Miss Anderson's teacher, Guiseppe Boghetti. Last weekend Blanche put on her white dress and sang before 3,000 persons with the Philadelphia orchestra. "I wasn't frightened," she said. "Not much, anyway."

A Father Mourns.

"Certainly I did not educate you for an easy life. My 'live dangerously' was practiced in your life."

Thus wrote Benito Mussolini, in a book addressed to his son Bruno, killed last August while testing a plane. The book, called "I Talk With Bruno," disclosed that Il Duce had a foreboding that the death of his second son, believed to be his favorite, was near.

Whether young women working in the same office should call each other by their given names or say "Miss" depends upon the customs of the particular office. When dealing with outsiders it is probably best to refer to each other as Miss, but out of office hours, or when no stranger is present, first names not only are permissible but more friendly.

The "Jefferson" Bible.

It is a miscellany rather than a Bible but it has been called the Jefferson Bible because Jefferson fathered the arrangement according to a scheme he had long cherished.

Beginning in 1804, during his presidency, he spent some of his leisure time pasting up a collection, which, at the last, comprised some less than half a hundred pages of what seemed to him to be the essential parts of the gospels.

Though the work was intended by Jefferson for use by the Indians, he wrote a friend that every night, before retiring, he would read from this, his home-made Bible, which he entitled, "The Life and Morals of Jesus of Nazareth."

"Pitfalls of Love"

(A Sequel to Marriage Meddlers)

By ADELE GARRISON

I shrank as far back against the wall of my recessed hiding place as I could get, when I heard that guttural voice from the basement window. To let either the marauders or Harry Underwood get a glimpse of me prematurely might spell the failure of Harry's plan to surprise them. But I clasped my tiny yet deadly silencer pistol with a tautness which reflected my determination to help Harry in any way I could.

My cheeks burned as I recalled my last attempt to protect myself with that pistol, when my hand rested upon it beside me in the railroad coach seat, but the young gangster, who had tried to get Marion's letter from me, guessed my ruse and wrested it from me, then went on with his terrorizing threats, which only Dicky's surprise appearance stopped him from making grim reality.

The men at the basement window, however, while deadly and with no scruples against murder, were, I was sure, of a much lower mentality than the "collegiate gangster" of the train. They were of the same type as the man who had tried to throttle me at the hotel—hired gunmen sent to do the bidding of the higher-ups, without questioning anything except the amount of money they would receive for success in carrying out their alotted job.

I could not see Harry, but I knew that he was tensed and ready as the gangsters followed their guttural-voiced leader through the window. It was dark in my recess and I threw my left arm over my face, so that nothing but the dark duc of my dress would be visible—or rather, I hoped, invisible—if they should pass me.

Leader Gives Orders.

My ears, always keen but now almost prenaturally sharp, heard the dropping of three pairs of feet to the floor. Evidently Harry was well hidden, for with the satisfied voice of a man who sees the beginning of a job well done, the man who was evidently the leader spoke again.

"So far, so good," he said. "Here you close that window, all except a crack. We don't want to advertise the joint to the police."

The sounds of a sharp, cracking blow, a gasp, a fall, put a period to his sentence. Then Harry Underwood's voice sounded a crisp command.

"Hands up, you other two! High! Drop it!"

There was the sound of a shot, then another, and a man slithered to the floor almost in front of me, alive but with a badly shattered leg. There was nothing the matter with his arms, however, and with the quickness of a striking snake he adjusted the pistol to which he still clung, and aimed it along the floor in Harry's direction.

Madge Quells One Gunman.

His hand was within reach of my foot, and I kicked out at it so viciously that I succeeded in deflecting his aim. Then, before he realized what was happening, I pointed my small pistol at his head and said firmly:

"Quick! Turn over on your face and lie still, unless you want me to use this."

He hesitated only the fraction of a second, then obeyed me.

"Madge! By all that's holy!" Harry Underwood shouted. "Come out of that quick and help me. But keep your pistol trained on that baby."

I edged out of the recess and caught back a sharp cry, for blood was dripping from Harry Underwood's coast sleeves. He had shifted his revolver to his left hand, but I knew he could shoot equally well with either hand. His lips were white, and I wondered, fearfully, how badly he was injured, and how long he could keep his gun trained on the sullen, snarling gunman standing in front of him with arms high above his head, a revolver still depending from his right hand.

The leader of the three was out cold at Harry's feet. A glance at him told even my far from experienced eyes that he would make no trouble for hours. But the man facing Harry was uninjured, and the man with the shattered leg was still able to shoot.

How long could Harry Underwood's steel will power enable him to remain conscious? That was the question which leaped to my mind, but I had no chance to answer it, for Lillian's husband was fairly shooting staccato orders at me.

"Don't take your eyes or pistol off that baby for a second," he said. "But stand ready to shove his revolver over toward me with your foot, once he lets go of it, which he's going to do right now."

CHAPTER XXIII

In a minute or two Joy glimpsed the dogs away off to her right. Obviously the lion trail had circled unexpectedly. The lion had cut back up the hill after apparently going left and down. It had misled Ward and the others momentarily.

"Look!" she called to her companions. "We can save time. Let's cut across and intercept the dogs. I'll go on. You follow as fast as you can!"

She spurred then, and in a matter of seconds was quite alone. But Old Mag sang out her tail call — "OW-u-u-u-u!" — and that gave Joy the proper direction.

Before she realized it she saw the dogs had halted a short distance ahead of her. Old Mag was in a frenzy of barking now and the other hounds were equally frantic beside her. Their attention was directed not up into a tree, as Ward had told Joy to expect, but down into a cave-like hole.

Joy skidded her horse to a stop, dropped reins and ran to the dogs.

"Goodness!" she murmured.

The cave entrance was dark. It was much like a well for 10 feet or so, slanting down into the rocks. Beyond that it was black dark. Obviously the lion had retreated in there.

"This is my chance!" Joy breathed. "I can make the kill alone before the others come. Ward said lions are cowards! They never attack human beings!"

She remembered his assurance on that point, and she was a girl with abundant courage. Moreover, adventure spirits had assailed her anew.

With sudden determination she unholstered the pistol she wore and dropped down into the hole. She was trembling a little, but more in excitement than in fear. Cautiously she edged deeper into the cave that was more horizontal now; she wanted to make the kill before Ward got her, just to show him!

This side of the mountain with its many boulders had been protected from the rain for the cave bottom was deep in dry leaves, chips and pine cones, Joy discovered. They rustled as she walked.

GROWR-R-R-R-R!"

The beast within roared frighteningly. It was, in fact, a growl that quite dominated the shrill yapping of the dogs outside. It sent chills through Joy.

She looked in. There, through the darkness as her eyes adjusted, she saw not one dark bloch but three! Not one set of eyes, but three pairs of them!"

One of the creatures was far larger than she knew a mountain lion to be. There had been a mounted specimen of lion back at college, no larger than a good-sized dog. But this thing stood taller than Joy herself!

"Oh-h-h-!" Joy shrieked a little, involuntarily, recognizing the beasts.

All at once she was shuddering in terror.

Ward McMurray's horse was pounding hard to skirt a great boulder there on the mountainside. The fine animal snorted, strained with the uphill running. Ward suddenly swerved him to the right.

"Hey!" Ward yelled and waved at those behind him.

He indicated with his arm that the trail they were following had turned unexpectedly here to the right. Polly and Ken waved back in understanding.

The trail was clear to Ward because he was accustomed to following his dogs' tracks. Moreover—

"Come on! Come on!" he yelled back again. "This is not a lion trail! It's bear!"

"Bear!" Polly shrieked in new elation. "Hurry on, Ken! That means sure 'nough doings!"

"Three of them!" Ward shouted as his sister and Ken drew closer. "Looks like a mother and two middle-sized cubs. I oughta whip our dogs for this, but you can hardly blame 'em. Fresh bear tracks drive any hound wild; They've moved on fast, too. I only hope they don't kill one of the dogs before we can get there."

"Bears kill the dogs?" Ken asked, in a shout.

"I'll say! Not like lions! Some of these bears weigh as much as a yearling bull. They can kill anything. And a mother with cubs will attack anything, believe me! You and Sis don't rush up foolish like. Hang back to tell Joy and the others."

"Why Ward — there's Joy's horse! Up there where the dogs are barking!"

"He stared ahead. "Good lord!" he breathed. And then—"Where is she? I don't see her! Thought she was behind!"

He spurred frenziedly now, so that his horse fairly leaped ahead. He came near to Joy's horse. It was wild eyed, having scented the bears where the dogs were yelping, and he was backing away dragging its bridle reins.

"Joy!" Ward called.

But noise of the dogs dominated everything. At that moment he saw the newspaper men, Glenn and Brookfield, who had come up and halted tentatively 50 yards or so away. Glenn was dismounting, camera in hand. He hastened forward on foot.

"Where's Joy?" Ward demanded, frantic.

"She was ahead*" Glenn replied. "Made a short cut when she saw the dogs had circled."

Ward has his .45 pistol out now, and he ran to the cave hole where the dogs were making such a disturbance. At once he saw Joy Boone crouched down there, and he became momentarily petrified from what he knew to be true. He just stood there staring, incredulous, terrified with and for her.

Something in a man like Ward McMurray, however, carries on even when extreme emergency confronts him. He wasn't consciously thinking, but intuitively he knew that his gun was of no value here. You can kill any lion with a pistol shot, whereas one or two pistol bullets usually serve only to infuriate a bear! Nevertheless, he took action immediately.

He kicked the nearest dog, sending it away whimpering. Motions at the others scattered them. He stooped down.

By this moment James Glenn was snapping photographs. Ward didn't even see that. Ward made one foolish attempt to reach his hand down and lift Joy, foolish because the 10-feet distance was too great. She had seen him. She looked up, pale with fear.

"Take it easy!" he ordered. "Don't move! I'm—coming!"

Then the gallant young man slid down into that hole with her. He had holstered his gun.

"W-Ward!" she murmured, when he crept near through the dried leaves and trash on the cave floor. "It's—it's—"

"I know! Bears, Joy! Don't move. It's a mother with big cubs. We couldn't even climb out. Stay behind me. Shut your eyes!"

Before she knew what he was doing, he had taken a match from his pocket and scratched it on a rock. The light flared. He tossed it onto the leaves, near the animals.

Polly and Ken and the other two men above were fascinated spectators to the drama down in the slanting rock hole. Polly saw the flames take hold and flash rapidly through the dry trash down there. She jerked at Ken.

"Stand back!" she ordered all of them. "Back, quick!"

In a moment came a tremendous roar, from the largest bear again. Then a sudden strange, eerie whimpering, almost a scream.

All at once there was a terrific scrambling.

A black-brown animal leaped past Ward, whose body shielded Joy crouched down there. It climbed up the projecting rocks of the well-like entrance in one grand swoop.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay

"The Authority on Authorities"

WHY FEAR FOUR-CARDERS?

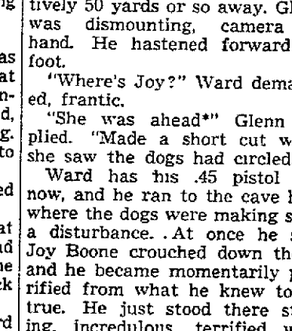
It has become a fetish with some advanced students of bidding to refrain from bidding four-card major suits on the first round. A dealer will start with a three-card minor suit instead, or even a two-card minor upon occasion. His partner will not respond on the first round with a major suit unless it is of at least five cards. The theory of all this is that it keeps the bidding low. Most assuredly, it does that sometimes, but also keeps their score lower than it otherwise should be, if they carry it to the extreme.



(Dealer: East. Neither side vulnerable.)

| East | South | West | North |
|---|---|---|---|
| Pass | Pass | Pass | 1 ♦ |
| Pass | 1 NT | | |

And that was all there was to the bidding of the pair that lost a tournament because of it. Playing at 1-No Trump against a lead of the club 2, South managed barely to eke out enough tricks to make his contract, three in spades, one in hearts, one in diamonds and two in clubs. The defenders took one trick in spades, two in hearts, one in diamonds and two in clubs.

At another table, more orthodox bidding occurred, with North bidding 1-Spade to open it. South raised this to 2-Spades, and North passed. At that it was played, and made, with the loss of one trick in spades, two in hearts and two in diamonds. This produced a score of 110 for the pairs who played at spades, and of 90 for those who played at No Trumps, counting in each case the 50 bonus for making a less-than-game contract and the value of the tricks. In brief, those who played at spades got good scores, since no clubs were lost, whereas those who played at No Trumps had bad scores.

Your Week-End Lesson.

When leading an unbid five-card suit containing some honor cards against a No Trump game contract, how do you determine whether you should open a small card or one of the honors? Can you give several illustrations of various suits to exemplify the points involved?

Tygers Close 40-Year Shelby Rivalry With 46-13 Win

Sport Podge by REX HESS

Two of the three teams to defeat the Mansfield City News this fall will meet at Canton Lehman stadium on Thanksgiving day to decide the mythical Ohio semi-pro gridiron championship. They are Minerva and Steubenville. The other club returned winner over Mansfield was the South Akron Awnings.

Two weeks ago Minerva handed the Awnings their first defeat in quite a few seasons. So it seems the Mansfielders have been traveling in pretty fair company this autumn. That's their argument when the boys from Galion say "look how many games you've lost."

Calling Minerva the "Green Bay of Ohio," the Canton Repository says the Minerva-Steubenville championship battle should be a toss-up, off their respective scores against Mansfield, 14 to 0 for Steubenville and 19 to 0 for Minerva.

Steubenville, undefeated in eight starts, would like to claim the Ohio title without further argument, says the Canton paper, but can hardly do that as long as the Minervas are licking their chops over their defeat of the Awnings.

The Stubbers wouldn't have the nerva
To claim that title from Minerva.

The Repository says the Minerva defeat was the first suffered by the South Akron team in 29 years.

And News-Journal Editor Don Lindsay rises to protest.

Don managed the Lorain semi-pros back there in '25 and thereabout. And Lorain beat the Barberton Eagles 3 to 0. "The next year, says Lindsay, "the Eagles moved, lock, stock and barrel, to South Akron and became the Awnings. Then they beat us three years in a row, 6 to 0, 18 to 0, and 6 to 0. I never heard of a South Akron team before that." And being a manager in that neck of the woods, Don should have heard.

If the Stubbers and Minervas are playing for the state title, what are the Mansfields and the Galions playing for at Galion tomorrow afternoon? The central Ohio championship?

They don't need any title to battle for. They've got a red-hot argument that's been going on for three weeks now about who has been scared of whom, and which has been running out on what. And they'll be doing battle because they've forced each other into it. It should be something to see.

* * *

But just in case—I said JUST IN CASE—the Galions beat the Mansfields by more than did the Minervas and the Steubenvilles, watch the Galions start making noises like state championship.

Buckeyes, Illinois Rate Even

Brown Won't Consider Ohio Loss an Upset.

COLUMBUS —(AP)— Ohio State and Illinois met here today in a Western conference football game that might develop into an even battle because of the Bucks' lack of reserve strength.

Ohio with five wins in six starts was favored generally by the experts, partly because Illinois is yet to win a major contest, but Coach Paul E. Brown of the Bucks said he anticipated a tight game.

"I wouldn't consider it a great upset if Illinois wins," Brown said.

The Bucks have 35 of their 40-player squad available, the others being out with injuries. The Illini, on the other hand, has 37 men fit for service.

Illinois is seeking its first victory over Ohio State since 1934 when Zuppke's eleven sprang the now-famous "Flying Dutchman" formation to knock Francis A. Schmidt's team out of an undefeated season by a score of 14 to 13.

The trappings and ceremonies of Homecoming day add color to the gridiron battle. Miss Kay Schroeder, 19-year-old New Bremen sophomore reigns queen with a court of five other lovely co-eds.

Approximately 50,000 fans, the smallest crowd of the year for the Bucks, were expected.

Kickoff time is 2 p. m. (EST).

Touchdown Tactics

By ELTON E. WIEMAN
Princeton Football Coach

THE SITUATION: It is your ball, second down, 9 yards to gain, on your own 30-yard line with a half minute remaining in the first quarter. The score is 0-0 and you have a brisk, favoring wind.

Ted Wieman

The teams are evenly matched as indicated by the scoreless first quarter. Both teams have made ground, but neither has made a sustained march. You have a fast halfback, a driving fullback, an average passer and a good kicker. That is the situation.

WHAT WOULD YOU DO?

1. End run?
2. Quick kick?
3. Pass?
4. Off-tackle slant?
5. Spinner?

YESTERDAY'S PROBLEM
By GEORGE A. MUNGER
Univ. of Pennsylvania Coach

THE SITUATION: Your team, as the result of a fumble by the opposing team, has scored a touchdown. You have scored another on the return of a punt by one of your backs who made a long run after receiving it. In both instances your team missed scoring the point after touchdown due to the aggressive charge of the opposing line and its blocking tactics. Despite your 12 to 0 lead the opposing gains at will through your line, although it cannot score early in the game. In the second half your foes score a touchdown and add the extra point, making it 12 to 7. Late in the fourth period you intercept a pass in your own territory and carry the ball to the opposition's eight yard line. Three plays carry the ball to the two yards line its it's fourth down in front of the goal posts.

ANSWER

I would go into field goal formation, fake a field goal, and throw a short pass to the end who has taken two steps and faces the passer. The opposition has already proven strong against field goals, having hurried and nearly blocked the two yard line and it's fourth pecting a field goal and the entire team is rushing the kicker.

Fourteen points were made in the first quarter by the visitors, 19 points in the second period, 20 points in the third, and 13 in the last quarter.

Shelby-Mansfield Relations Closed on Friendly Note

By REX HESS
(News-Journal Sports Editor)

Shelby high school officials today emphatically denied a story out of Shelby that football relations had been broken off with Mansfield after Shelby "accused Mansfield of using the feeder system to develope athletes in grade school for high school competition."

Principal O. H. Schaaf and Coach Bill Query of Shelby both declared there had never been any mention of a feeder system, or any other part of Mansfield's athletic setup.

Both asserted the only reason for severing gridiron relations with Mansfield was the fact that Shelby realized that Mansfield was too big, and the Whippets were going out of their class to play the Tygers.

"Don't let anyone get the idea that anything but amicable relations exist between Mansfield and Shelby high schools," said Principal Schaaf. "As a matter of fact, relations in the past few years have been more friendly between the two schools than they had been at any time in the 40-year rivalry.

"A month ago we realized that Mansfield had grown entirely too big for us, and was continuing to improve, while Shelby athletics, because of the size of our school, were not showing the same rate of improvement.

"I talked to your superintendent about it, and we agreed the best thing to do would be to discontinue the rivalry, at least for the present, with the playing of this year's game. There was never any thought of our making accusations regarding a feeder system. It was just that we felt we couldn't compete against a school the size of Mansfield."

Said Coach Bill Query: "I knew that this would be the last game between the two schools, but I never heard any mention of accusations being made against the Mansfield athletic system. It was merely that Mansfield is too big for us."

In closing the long rivalry with last night's game, Shelby officials realize they are probably giving up their biggest home crowd of the 1942 season.

"We had a two-year contract with Mansfield," explains Principal Schaaf. "We didn't feel that it was fair to ask Mansfield to call off that contract while we owed Mansfield a game, so we took this step with Mansfield owing us a game under the contract."

Coach Query was highly pleased with the showing made by his Whippets against Mansfield last night. "They acted like they really wanted to play football," he declared. "They were inspired. If they had played that kind of football all through the season, the Mansfield game is the only one they would have lost."

As for the Mansfield athletic system, it isn't so much of a system as might be imagined. Tag football in the grade schools is under the supervision of school principals, and coaching is largely a matter of volunteer effort by P. T. A. members or fans. In one school the coaching is done by a woman, and successfully too. But grade school tag football does nothing more than interest the boys in the game.

The junior high coaching system doesn't begin to compare with Massillon's in size, quality, or salaries. The junior high coaches have a full program of physical education to attend to, and football and basketball coaching is limited to the teaching of the few fundamentals possible under the limited setup.

The reference to quality is no reflection on the Mansfield junior high coaches. Massillon has junior high coaches capable of taking head-coaching jobs in some of the biggest high schools in the state, as was shown this year when Steubenville went to Massillon for tis head coach.

And not one of this year's senior team at Mansfield played junior high football.

Perrysville Loses To Big Prairie

PERRYSVILLE — Big Prairie trimmed Perrysville high school's basketball team here on the Perrysville court 44-31 last night.

Trailing by four points at the end of the first quarter, Big Prairie went into the lead in the second frame and led the rest of the way.

It was the first game for both teams.

Last year Perrysville captured the Ashland county league championship and the county tournament.

Battling Whippets Score 2 Touchdowns

Mansfield Piles Up Season's Biggest Score On Aerial Attack

By REX HESS, News-Journal Sports Editor.

THERE was honor for all in that game of ball at Stadium field last night, a game which saw the end of 40 years of gridiron strife between the Shelby high school Whippets and the Mansfield high Tygers.

In the 46 to 13 victory piled up by Mansfield there was the highest score of the season for the high stepping Tygers, while the 13 points for Shelby represented the first serious dent made in Mansfield's famed defensive machine this season.

The Whippets became not only the second team to score on Mansfield this fall, but the first to score more than once, and their 13 points were just seven more than mighty Massillon was able to chalk up against the Tygers.

Yes, there was honor for all, and both the Tygers and Whippets can feel proud of their performance today. A fighting Shelby aggregation that battled right down to the final gun made an interesting ball game out of what, on their season's records, should have been a routine walk-away for the Tygers.

The Tygers didn't seem worked up to the proper pitch at the start of the game, and the Whippets battled 'em off their feet through the first quarter, but that couldn't go on forever. Mansfield soon caught the fighting spirit of their traditional rivals, and then the difference in class set the scoring ledger right as the Tygers piled up 19 points in the second period and 20 in the third.

But the Whippets were never ready to say "uncle." With the score 39 to 0 against them, they struck in two lightning flashes late in the third quarter and early in the fourth to mark up 13 points and really get in the ball game.

Bob Laubie, chunky all-N. C. O. backfield star, was the scoring spark for the Whippets, and on his first touchdown dash he really set the world on fire. Fifty yards he rambled on a smash off tackle that started as a fake punt by Roberts. Mansfield was badly fooled on the play, and once past the line of scrimmage all Laubie had to do was run. And he could run.

True, the first Shelby touchdown was made at the expense of a second string left side of the Mansfield line, which was sucked in by the fake kick.

But Laubie's second touchdown, early in the final period, was made against the Mansfield first team, and the only break the Whippets needed there was the recovery of a Mansfield fumble on the Tyger 34-yard line. Three Shelby players were on the bottom of the pile in the scramble for the ball.

Laubie, Poland and Roberts sparked the 34-yard touchdown drive, which produced three first downs, the last coming on the two yard line where Laubie blasted over for his second score.

Mansfield's touchdowns also came as lightning bolts from the blue sky, the first blue sky the Tygers have seen over their home gridiron since the opening game of the season.

Two plays produced a Mansfield touchdown early in the second period. After Bob Winbigler's punt had gone out of bounds on the Shelby five yard line, Ken Krupp took Nimmons' return punt and ran it back 10 yards to the Whippet 34. And from there Lightnin' Jones passed 34 yards to Winbigler for a touchdown. A pass from Doolittle to Jones for extra point was incomplete.

Two minutes later Mans

STOCK MARKET TRADERS STUDY LUMBER REPORT

Flattening of Industrial Curve Indicated by Latest Figures.

NEW YORK—The stock market was a shade on the irregular side in today's early proceedings.

Market trend analysts saw further signs of a flattening out of the industrial curve in the survey of the National Lumber Manufacturers association.

For the week ended Nov. 8 the organization put production in this field at 5 per cent under the preceding week, but 11 per cent greater than a year ago; shipments 17 per cent less than the week before and 10 per cent below the 1940 week, and new orders 13 per cent fewer than the preceding week and 9 per cent down from last year.

Followers of the motors noted reports that the Office of Production Management was studying proposals to shift new passenger car output from heavy to lighter models as a means of maintaining factory work at a reasonable level.

HOROSCOPE

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE
For Sunday, Nov. 16.

SUNDAY'S horoscope is a very favorable one for all affairs of church and state. It should be a propitious time for seeking honors, promotion, tokens of preferment and appreciation from those in high places. Also a time for building up happy and helpful friendships and comradeship, but not with too impulsive or pressing approach.

Those whose birthday it is may expect a year of promotion, favors, preferment and substantial aid or endorsement from influential persons. These should be approached with gracious, expansive and hospitable feeling rather than sordid, erratic and selfish interest and aim. Refrain from all hazardous and reckless conduct.

A child born on this day although having a somewhat wayward, impulsive and irritable nature also will be kindly, compassionate, generous and genial.

For Monday, Nov. 17.

Monday's astrological forecast is for a conflicting state of affairs, with much of profitable and progressive action in all pertaining to the professions, writing, communication, travel, contracts, publicity and publishing, yet there may also be stubborn obstacles, delays or disappointments, especially concerning property.

Those whose birthday it is may look for a stirring and lucrative year in all pertaining to the arts, literature, correspondence, short journeys, and publicity, with some forms of business thriving. But in investments, real property, and commerce with elderly folk or institutions be prepared for delays or disappointments.

A child born on this day while being versatile, exceptionally talented and successful yet may be reckless, indulgent and turbulent in its emotional life.

TELLS STORY OF 'ARK' SINKING

Writer, Aboard Plane Carrier, Felt Blast of Torpedo, Recounts Last Hours.

nounced that only one seaman is dead as a result of the sinking.)

Many of us were near tears when we heard that after a struggle of nearly 12 hours against the gaping hole amidships she finally had sunk. At 4:30 a. m. yesterday Capt. L. E. H. Maund sadly realized she could not be saved and ordered her abandoned.

Two hours later the Ark Royal plunged.

I was in my cabin washing up before tea when the torpedo hit amidships on the starboard side. There was a sudden shuddering crash and the lights went out. I was flung against the wall. For fully a minute the ship shuddered. I knew we were torpedoed. Grabbing a lifebelt I ran out along the passageway in the dim light.

I saw officers and ratings filing up the ladder leading to the upper deck. These men were as calm as though they were going down the gangway at Gibraltar. "Damned hard luck on the old lady, sir," one rating said.

The Ark was listing alarmingly to starboard with white waves flowing past, ominously stained with dark brown oil.

The vibrations of the engines beneath our feet died away. They restarted for a moment, then stopped. Then through the loudspeaker above came: "Everybody to portside." Almost before we could move again came: "Prepare to abandon ship."

Crowding the decks were hundreds of the ship's crew, some in overalls and some in underwear. Ropes began to snake down from the flight deck and cork rafts splashed into the sea. Then a destroyer pulled alongside. An officer ordered the men to form in line four deep. Soon a destroyer came close under our rails. Ropes were flung up from her and were caught and fastened.

Like monkeys the men began to slip down onto the destroyer's down 15 feet of rope to the deck down 15 feet of rope to the destroyer. From there I saw a scene I will never forget. From the flight deck 60 feet above us, the boat deck and the weather deck men were swarming down the ropes, dressed in all kinds of clothes, many of them half naked.

Those on the Ark were waving and cracking jokes with the others already safe. "This is luxury torpedoing," said a marine lieutenant as he swung to safety.

I knew he was referring to the day before when we were driving through heavy seas in a half gale. In such weather no destroyer could have come alongside and the loss of life might have been heavy.

For nearly an hour men slid down the ropes until the forward deck of the destroyer was packed with men.

The captain and certain senior officers and engineer officers and a strong body of men remained aboard.

She lay at an agle suggesting a motorcar with both wheels on one side off. The destroyers were now circling around the stricken carrier to prevent any new attack.

Later we heard the joyful thrill of a voice calling all rescued members of the engine room staff to return to the Ark.

"By the light of torches, burly stokers scrambled eagerly over the rails. Smoke from the Ark Royal's funnel was black against the sky, billowing over the ship against the faint glow of the lights of Gibraltar toward which she was so desperately trying to make her way.

The survivors were distributed at Gibraltar at breakfast time to various ships in the harbor.

When we saw the escort destroyers returning to Gibraltar we thought the Ark Royal would soon be home. There was stunned silence among the officers when they were told by another officer that she sank 25 miles out.

An engineer said: "We got the pumps started but the water was rising fast. The captain called for steam from the boilers. We managed to get up some steam but after a while the gauges fell, the lights dimmed and we knew we had set ourselves a hopeless task.
